Concept Note

Technology is basic to human nature and it interacts deeply with human society along with ecological and geographical conditions to produce an impact on the directions and pace of social evolution. The study of technology and its social significance is one of the latest and most innovative methods in the field of social science research and form a major object of scientific enquiry. Technology as a tool of analysis can help unravel the basis on which human thoughts and ideas flow. Although India has one of the largest tribal populations in the world, tribal knowledge systems have not been captured and stored in a systematic way and are, therefore, facing extinction. The growth of modernity and new technologies are threatening the loss of a great store of knowledge held by indigenous people. The primary objective of this seminar is to integrate academically the tribals of northeast India with mainland India. The study of tribal technology, with northeast India in focus is important because the region lies at the tri-junction of China, Myanmar and mainland India having a continuity of tribal culture. The purpose of this seminar is to present and discuss the various aspects of tribal technology in India.
