On the whole, the sessions were enriching. They were effective in equipping the teachers for better assessment and care, especially in the area of providing insights into emotional maturity. The workshop made the teachers rethink and prepare their strategies for more effective learning.

I would like to thank Fr. Dr. P. Suresh, Principal, Don Bosco College Kohima for giving us the opportunity to attend the workshop.

DEPRESSIVE VS PREVENTIVE SYSTEM IN EDUCATION: A 'SWOT' ANALYSIS

(S: Strength; W: Weakness; O: Opportunity; T: Threat/challenge)

DEPRESSIVE SYSTEM

STRENGTH: METHODOLOGY

Depressive System : Makes laws known.

WEAKNESS : Dangerous consequences.

OPPORTUNITIES : NIL

APPLICATION

- Needs to operate in a structured manner.
- Infer punishment deserved.
- Words and looks of the superior : severe and threatening.
- Good exemplary standards breeds contempt.
- The one in charge of the institution should be rarely used with the students to give weight to his/her authority.
- Be prepared when inferior punishment is threatened.

Don Bosco College , Kohima organized its first offline Staff Development Program after the pandemic. The programme was chaired by Mrs. Jarani Mao, Coordinator IQAC. The session started with the blessings of God between us by Miss Razoukhrienuo, Asst. Prof. Dept of Sociology and welcome note was given by Fr. Christudass sdb, Director of Bosco Computer Centre DBCK. It was attended by all the teaching staff of DBCK.

The session started with the Introduction of Classroom Management Techniques and understanding our students in the best possible way. Practicing patience with rational detachment to set effective limits and also to keep a schedule of our teaching so that we are at all times prepared. We were made aware of the causes of certain behavior in a student and to engage with them so that they can open up to us and we can find the possible causes as well as address the bad behaviour quickly. The rise of Problematic Students Behaviour on the rise not only in a classroom but in a society at large becoming as issue for all the educators were taught to deal with patience and rationalism. Simple things that causes distress in a student were asked to be dealt with mindful precipitation.

Following on our own expectations is the key to modeling timeliness and productivity. The more organized we are, the more opportunity there is to focus on teaching and learning which would also help the students respect schedules and work within designated time frames. As a General Rule, Consistency is very important, it was also advised to get feedback from students regarding our teaching and approach towards them and also to double check students perceptions on us

The second session was about Counselling technique in Handling Students where our resource person emphasized mainly of Mentor sessions in educational institutions. The importance of Mentors towards Mentees was mainly build on understanding the students as an individual and building rapport or communication bridge with them based on trust and understanding. Teachers as Mentors were expected to have compassion for each student which should reflect through our non verbal behavior and Para verbal communication. We were asked to keep in mind of how we respond to a student in distress and to encourage in positive self talk emphasizing on the question 'What is it about and how can I help?'

J. C. Joseph

Inattentive, rowdy or challenging students who also distracts others when we are teaching are to be encouraged with asking questions and using names and also by friendly eye contact. We must keep in mind that sometimes disruption is just misguided energy that simply needs to be invited into the conversation. Setting effective limits, review and posting classroom expectations is important so that the expectations are clearly visible to the students.

The program concluded with Vote of Thanks by Dr. Imtinaro Longkumer Asst. Prof. Dept. Of Education

Creative Writing Workshop for the Naga Languages

Organised by the Sahitya Akademi (National Academy of Letters), New Delhi, in collaboration with the Department of Tenyidie, Nagaland University, Kohima Campus: Meriema.

THE CONCEPT

"We write to taste life twice, in the moment and in retrospect."
-Anais Nin

The 3-day creative writing workshop for the Naga languages is an attempt to promote and look at the various aspects of creative writing – poetry, prose and drama in the context of the native language writings in Nagaland and the North-East.

Historically, the Naga tribes came from a primary oral culture, and the transition from the oral world to the literal world reflects that there has been a marked shift in the way individual experience is narrativised today, in contrast to the older generation, even as more people are writing in English and attempts to reawaken native language writing is underway. Today, creative writing in Nagaland has become a way of not only writing about individual experience, but also about engaging with the rich oral heritage.

Nagaland has a number of writers and poets as well as publication houses today, and it has become very important to help hone the talents and skills of those who are engaged in the creative writing process so that they can take their stand even nationally and internationally. An exposure to those who work in this area, specially novelists and playwrights, who can help and address these issues, is the need of the hour. Literature is a pre-requisite for any language development and therefore inciting young minds to creative writing in their language will contribute immensely to the maintenance, sustenance and development of the Naga languages. This will not only ensure that the quality of the writing (in English) evolves, but even regional language writers will be encouraged.

With this in mind, the creative writing workshop welcomes anyone from any walk of life, interested in the literary arts, to participate in this workshop.

://MORUNGEXPRESS.COM/CATEGORY/NAGALAND) 📅 30th October 2021

er 30 (MExN): For decades, indigenous people like Nagas have been ‘spoken for’ and ‘misrepresented’ by colonial ts and historians, noted Dr Neikehienuo Mepfhu-o while observing that “emerging Naga writers seek to write and own history and personal experiences and views instead of solely relying on history handed down to them by non-re topic “The non-fiction in fiction: Incorporating reality in fiction” on the concluding day of the three-day creative top for the Naga Languages at Nagaland University, she remarked that “this new generation of writers feel the reserve their authentic identity and experiences through its representation in literature.”

ief that Naga writers are driven by their awareness of the power of literature as a dynamic tool in changing the ople, and added that, “today, through poems, novels, short stories, and even in dissertation writing, Nagas are ous aspects of their own culture and a society that is previously defined by labels and stereotypes.”

Regarding Naga literature, she observed that “there has been a lot of publications in the last few years but it is still at a nascent stage with the first novel published only in 2003.” It is with a conscious need and desire to rewrite history, she expressed “that some Naga writers started documenting their own personal stories and even the history of our people as reaction against misrepresentation and typecasting.”

In this regard, she made mention of writers like Temsula Ao, Easterine Kire, Monalisa Changkija, and Nini Lungalang who, she said, “initiated and brought Naga literature to where it is today – inspiring and opening avenues for other writers who will come after them.”

Dr Neikehienuo Mepfhu-o further related her own experience of writing her book on domestic violence titled- “My Mother’s Daughter” which earlier won the prestigious Gordon Graham Prize for Naga Literature in the fiction category. In the book, she said, stories of real victims were fictionalized to make it less obvious as some of the respondents were a bit wary of telling their stories for personal reasons.

To maintain anonymity of the respondents, she used “the literary technique of Nameless Characters in the book.” In incorporating real events and experiences in fiction, she pointed out that “there are some essential elements and narrative techniques that need to be considered.” “In fiction and nonfiction writing, verisimilitude is employed”, she explained in this regard.

She further dwelt on the qualities of empathy and understanding while writing but in the meantime, asserted that “one must also stay objective while writing a story based on real experiences.” One of the struggles in incorporating an actual event/experience in your fictional story, she said “is the actual events getting in the way of a good narrative.”

“It is important to write with willingness to change any part of the true story you are basing your narrative around. The true events should never cause you to compromise the fictional narrative,” she put across.

Two other sessions including “Indigenous Poetry: An Expedient Resource to Modern Poetic Creation” and “Fiction as Mirror to Society” were also conducted with Duovituo Kuolie and Sentilong Ozukum as resource persons. These two sessions were chaired by Theyiesinuo Keditsu and Kemtila Alinger respectively.

T Senka Ao, Recipient of Governor’s Award for Literature, 2016 was the chief guest for the valedictory programme during which certificates were also distributed to the participants. Dr Adenuo Shirat Luikham, Guest Faculty, Department of Tenyidie, Nagaland University chaired the programme while Dr Kethokhrienuo Belho, Asst. Professor, Department of Nagaland University proposed the vote of thanks.

NAAC manual was provided to everyone in soft copies by the resource person himself. The indicators which included 7 Criteria and 31 key indicators, 35 qualitative metrics and 38 quantitative metrics of NAAC assessment program were introduced to us as a part of introduction which were the main objective of judgement by the NAAC. Illustrations were made taking example of field work project of 5 years on children as in the outcome of judgment would be purely based on how many children were active and took part in the project in that 5 years and not the area of field work. Field work which could be for Pollution by vehicles could be done within the campus and documented properly with appearance of report and pictures in the Local daily which can be done scientifically and these are the areas to be focused on mainly. The grades pattern were also explained to us in brief which were revised 4 times atleast which were to be taken importantly while submitting our assessment.

Followed by tea break from 11:00am to 11:30 am

The continuation of the session was from 11:30am to 1:30pm which emphasized on teaching methods by giving the students a chance to perform so to create a situation in such way. Creation of educational games by making it more interesting for the students to learn and well as have fun and participate are a part of the performance the students would imply and experiment. The students likeability towards the teacher comes as an individual person, interest, understanding and communication but not by intelligence. Challenging the students on the lesson based topic are supposed to be the key to interest them and letting them actively participate in teaching. Building of discipline must be based on concern and respect but not in the harsh way and encouraging them to make use of ICT tools to find notes or articles and also

f. r. pinheiro

Our respected resource person implemented an exercise game (Mango clap and Pepsi clap) for boosting our energy and sharpening our mind. We were each given an aptitude test paper and asked to rate according to our own personality and total the marks. The test was based on-

Perceptions of multiple intelligence was discussed thoroughly according to how a teacher sees a student. The session ended with an assignment given to the faculty to write an experience feedback on what ways multiple intelligence can be implemented in the Teaching-Learning Process which will be evaluated and discussed in the year end FDP session with our resource person.
